NEW YORK (AP)—Whitey Ford, southpaw ace of the world champion New York Yankees, today disclosed in a first-person article in a national magazine that major league pitchers swap tips on batters in the current "rabbit baiting" to keep from becoming as extinct as the dodo.

In a story titled "American Pitchers' Union" appearing in True magazine, Ford described a "graying system" in which pitchers exchange notes on the weaknesses of certain batters.

both during the championship schedule and during the off season, as an answer to "hopped-up balls, pulled-in fences and lighter and livelier bats."

The stubby left-hander, whose 31-23 won-lost record gives him the best winning percentage of any active major league pitcher, noted the majors' anti-fraternization rule in the article—a "ridiculous rule" in his opinion—and said, "Maybe I'm destroying organized baseball by writing this article, but I sure don't think so."

Ford used Walt Drope, now with the Chicago White Sox, as the prime example of how pitchers join forces to stop a hitter.

"When I came to the Yankees in July 1950," said Ford, "everybody was running around trying to find a way to stop Drope (then with the Boston Red Sox). . . . He was leading the whole league in batting and runs batted in, and he was right up there in home runs. . . . The pitchers from the seven other American League teams started comparing notes on their experiences with Drope and exchanging tips on how to handle the big guy. By September the 'book' on Drope had been pretty well set, and he was no longer feared. Drope, we pitchers discovered, could hit any kind of pitch that was inside the strike zone. But— one pitcher quickly told another—he would chase balls that were just a little off the plate. . . .

With this information, we all started throwing the 'book' at Big Walt.

WACO, Tex. (AP) — A 41-year-old painter has made an oral statement here that he fatally shot a man in Little Rock, Ark., about 20 years ago.

Dist. Atty. Burney Walker said the man, an alcoholic suffering from delirium tremens, told a story that closely paralleled the fatal shooting of a chain store manager in Little Rock in 1936.

Walker said a doctor called police and reported the man was suffering from alcoholism. At the police station in Waco, he told a story of shooting a Little Rock man but later refused to make a signed statement about it.

A man named M. B. (Nick) Makin, manager of a Little Rock grocery chain store was shot and killed during a holdup on Nov. 7, 1936. The manager was slain when he jumped on the running board of a fleeing robber's automobile. A man was tied in Little Rock for the slaying but was acquitted.

The painter is being in County jail here. A this home police found a note which Walker said apparently was from his wife which said simply "this is it."

Atom Weapons Not for Small Wars

LONDON (AP) — An American spokesman has told the Soviet Union the United States never intends to use atomic weapons in small, border incidents, but that doesn't mean they wouldn't be used under any circumstances.

Disarmament Delegate Harold Stassen gave the Russians that word yesterday at the 204th meeting of the U. S. Disarmament sub-committee.

Citing historic miscalculations which played key roles in starting past wars, Stassen warned the Soviets against thinking the United States would not act with nuclear weapons if the situation demanded such steps.

These three companies, employing 107,000 people, with sales in 1956 totaling one billion, two hundred sixty-six million dollars, announce the signing of agreements providing for a fully integrated program of engineering, production, sales and service of automotive vehicles; automotive marine and industrial gasoline and diesel engines; and diesel and gasoline fuel injection systems. All of these companies have been associated for years with quality, precision manufacture and high-performance products.

Pursuant to these agreements, Daimler-Benz and Curtis-Wright have formed an American company — Curtis-Wright and Mercedes-Benz, Inc. — to provide for the development and sale of Daimler-Benz products in the United States, Canada, Mexico and Cuba.

Studebaker-Packard Corporation in signing the agreements will now make available to its dealers a full line of domestic and imported sports cars, convertibles, sedans and station wagons ranging in price from under $2,000 up to $13,000 — gasoline and diesel powered trucks and all-wheel drive utility vehicles.

Mercedes-Benz cars and distinctive Mercedes-Benz features — such as fine speechwork, swing axles, and transmissions — will be exclusive to Studebaker-Packard.

The Utica-Bend Division of Curtis-Wright Corporation, now building diesel engines for the U. S. Navy, will import and manufacture Mercedes-Benz diesel engines and diesel and gasoline engine fuel injection systems under the agreements. The engines will range from a 4-cylinder model of 25 h.p. to a supercharged 8-cylinder model of 600 h.p.

Further agreements are being negotiated between Daimler-Benz and Curtis-Wright Corporation for the interchange of rights for the manufacture of aircraft products.

the traditional wedding marches. The bride was attired in a waltz-length dress of white lace with matching veil of fingertip length. She carried a white Bible topped with a bridal bouquet.

Serving as the bride's only attendant was her sister, Miss Frances Jackson, who wore a white gown of taffeta under net and a corsage of pink carnations.

Rufus Smith, brother of the groom, was best man.

An improvised arch was banked with arrangements of white gladioli and emerald green foliage. Flanking the focal point of the festivity were candelabra.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Jackson chose a navy suit with white accessories. She clipped a corsage of pink carnations at her shoulder.

The bridegroom's mother wore a blue dress with white accessories and her corsage was of white carnations.

Following the ceremony a reception was held in the dining room. The bride and groom were seated in pink and white, and beautiful arrangements of spring flowers were placed at vantage points throughout the reception rooms. A two-tiered wedding cake was served by Mrs. Frank Walls. Mrs. David Bright, sister of the bride, served the punch. Miss Sue Wise presided at the bride's book and registered approximately 75 guests.

The bride is a graduate of Lewisville High School and the bridegroom was graduated from Hope High School, and attended Texarkana College.

After a short wedding trip, the couple will reside at 2212 Hazel Street, Texarkana.

Trouble Flares in Montgomery, Ala.

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — An exchange of blows between a white man and three Negro women flared yesterday on a racially integrated Montgomery city bus.

Police said it was the first racial incident on a city bus since shortly after the U. S. Supreme Court ordered an end to segregation on them Dec. 21. The four were charged with assault and battery.

James E. Grice Jr., 31, told police he gave his seat at the front of a bus to a white woman and then moved toward the center of the bus.

He said he asked a Negro woman to move to the rear so he could sit down but that the woman slapped him, the woman, identified by police as Josephine Boldin, 19, said Grice cursed her and ordered her to move, then struck her twice with a wrench.

The bused segregation laws had required Negroes to give up seats toward the front of buses to white persons and move to the rear.

DOROTHY DIX

Wife Still Raising Ruckus Over Strange Gal's Card

Dear Dorothy Dix: I know it's long past Christmas, but an incident that occurred over the holidays is still causing friction in our home. While opening the holiday mail, I came across a card signed with a woman's full name and address to my husband. I had never heard of the woman. Naturally I was upset. When he came home I demanded an explanation.

He said she was a married woman who works in the office, but he couldn't understand why she had sent him a card. My husband is a good man, and I still can't understand, or believe, that he would have gotten a card from a casual co-worker. What's your opinion?

MRS. G. T. Dear Mrs. G. T.: You are making a big, and prolonged, fuss over absolutely nothing. The practice of sending Christmas cards to co-workers and business associates, even when they are very casual acquaintances, is widespread. Many firms print lists of employees' names and addresses especially for the convenience of card-happy people who go down the list and send greetings to everyone.

There certainly is nothing to criticize in the custom. The beautiful cards of Christmas should receive a "warm welcome" even if their origin is remote. Do stop fussing about it.

Dear Dorothy Dix: When school closes, Hugh is leaving for a summer job. I'll be in the city all summer. Meanwhile, Jerry has reappeared, asking for a date. I don't go steady with Hugh, and wonder what would be the best time to introduce the boys. If I do it before Hugh goes away, he may think I'm too hasty. In lining up new dates; if I wait, it might look as if I were two-timing him.

PAULM Dear Paulm: Introduce the boys now. Don't make complications where none should exist.

Dear Dorothy Dix: After 12 years of constant effort, I'm about ready to admit my failure as a wife. I cook everything my husband likes, paint, do home repairs, save money and never have I demanded anything from him. Yet he's always grouchy, everything I do is wrong and he doesn't seem to care for me at all.

AMMY Dear Amy: Nobody really appreciates things that come cheaply. From the beginning your idea was to serve, never asking, never expecting a return. Your husband was quite content to take everything, give nothing. You've reached the saturation point of giving. Now do a little demanding.

Clues Sought in Gangland Style Slaying

JOLIET, Ill. (AP) — State and Will County police today hunted for clues in the gangland style slaying of a former Chicago policeman, one of the Moretti brothers who figured in the sensational murder trial of their policeman brother in 1932.

The strangled, bullet-riddled and beaten body of husky Salvatore Moretti, 32, was found yesterday in the trunk of an auto alongside a lonely country road about seven miles west of Joliet.

A few miles from the death scene is Stateville Penitentiary where Salvatore's brother Michael, 37, is serving a life sentence for the 1931 slaying of a 15-year-old youth in a West Side Chicago lot after a tavern fight.

Salvatore, a bachelor, was an auto salesman since he was fired five years ago from the Park District in another development stemming from Michael's murder case.

His body, shot twice in the head and twice in the chest, was found in the trunk of an auto alongside a lonely country road about seven miles west of Joliet.

Salvatore and Vincent and Michael's wife Emily, also indicted on the charge with the three brothers, were acquitted.

A black and white illustration of a young boy standing with his hands on his hips. He is wearing a vertically striped suit jacket over a matching vest and a white shirt with a dark bow tie. He has dark hair and is looking slightly to the right. The illustration is done in a simple, bold line style.

De la Mezziere came out to them, and with a polite apology to Mollie, asked if Allan could spare him a quarter of an hour in the office.

Brisbarre, unshaven but gay, was also in the office. He had scarcely exchanged a word with Allan since his return, having been tactful enough not to intrude on his privacy with Mollie.

"Take a chair, Colonel," said de la Mezziere. "We have heard from Nail that all is quiet there again, so that if I should want them I could get more troops. But, thanks to your intervention, that should not be necessary now. I have asked Father Paleologue to come ashore, so that I can have the benefit of his advice also. But the important thing is what to do next. We must get hold of this disagreeable old lady at Clusium and her other son, before they can do harm."

Allan had already made up his mind that the revolt was over, and he had not considered that any further military operation might be needed.

"I don't think the old lady or Camille Fernana can do any harm now," he said. "Apart from a few guards at Clusium, I gathered that the whole Seknouga army, if you can call it such, was what we saw this morning. All the notables except Camille Fernana and Kassim Moural were present when they made their peace with you and me this morning. Neither the old lady nor Kassim nor Camille have any following left."

"I'm glad to hear it," said de la Mezziere. "Ah, here is Pere Paleologue! Come and sit down, and join our discussion."

After a rapturous reunion with Brisbarre, Paleologue joined them, his bony knuckles on the table in front of him.

"The revolt is over, I agree," said de la Mezziere; "but we must still put our hands on the dissidents, who have not made their peace."

"The real instigator of all the trouble is dead," said Allan dryly. "You are suggesting that I should leave her eldest son and her at large, are you?" asked de la Mezziere.

If Jules and Georges and all their friends are going to play fair, it doesn't matter a hoot what the other two do. The best thing of all, in fact, would be if they were quietly allowed to disappear, anywhere, so long as they didn't stay here. When the Seknouga see how well the new setup is going, with the French resident and the Fernana dynasty recognized by Tunis as a recognized ruling native sultanate under French protection and advice, the old lady and Camille are busted flushes."

De la Mezziere lit a cigarette thoughtfully, and puffed at it.

"You need not be afraid that I have forgotten our bargain of this morning," he said. "I will keep my side of it, you may be sure. I am thinking, as I say, of the relations in Tunis. When I passed through La Goulette last night it was quite clear in my mind that I had a free hand. Today the situation throughout the whole country is much better, and already I have had a message clipping away at the free hand which they gave me. I have been told to make examples of those who have not made their peace."

"If I can say one more thing," began Allan. "You and I have both seen some odd things done by the administrations in the Levant. And elsewhere. We have seen them shoving clemency at the wrong times. When it was bound to be considered a sign of weakness. We have also seen strictness shown at just the wrong time — just at the precise moment when a spot of clemency was what was wanted. The man on the spot knows best which is wanted, and you're you say, at this moment, in this situation"

There was a pause. Allan was fidgeting in his chair. De la Mezziere's difficulties were only too obvious, but Allan was sure that his heart was in the right place. They had known each other casually before the war; but it was during the fighting in Syria that they had come to appreciate each other's worth. They had spent 36 hours scrambling in June over a shoulder of Mount Hermon where the snow still lay, accompanied by half a dozen picked men from three different races, in an attempt to snipe and harass the main road and down the Barada Gorge into Damascus and the celebrations in the Officers' Club. They had never seen each other again until that very morning; but each had preserved of the other a warm memory.

"Well, mon vieux," said de la Mezziere. "What do you suggest this time? Another long crawl over a mountain with a Bern gun?"

"I'll tell you exactly: to take your eye off me for three or four hours. Nothing more. The Seknouga's notables are over the road, in the hotel; they sent me a message half an hour ago inviting my wife and me to join them. You are busy in this office, writing a report or something. I leave. I am back by 4 o'clock or by sunset at the latest. You haven't the slightest idea where I am. I'm having a spot of sleep. I've earned it. Anyway, I'm not in your office, and you don't precisely know where I am."

XXXIV

Allan and Mollie found no fewer than eight notables gathered in the familiar dining room of the hotel. Jules Fernana was overjoyed to see them. All unctuousness had dropped from his manner; he was now a cultured host, pure and simple. He introduced his friends to Mollie with the air of one who was sure that all his guests would like each other. But when he came to introduce his brother Georges, Allan intervened, addressing Jules by his Christian name for the first time, without either permission or embarrassment.

"My dear Jules," he said, "I am going to claim the privilege of introducing Georges to my wife, myself. Mollie, this is Georges Fernana, with whom, as I told you, I had an unexpected yachting trip last night. I hope that one day we shall see both Jules and Georges at Larg. We can't do them quite as well as at the Hotel Asdrubal, but we'll do our best and they'll have to put up with it."

The two brothers looked warily at him.

"We want to have no secrets from you, Col. Larg, except such as might be embarrassing for you to share with us," said Georges. "If you are asking us if there is any chance of their making their peace with the French, the answer is No. Never."

"I thought so," said Allan. "And again, I don't want to pry into their plans. I am getting so many secrets into my head that soon I won't know what I can talk about to whom. I am perfectly certain that de la Mezziere is full of good faith; but I have the feeling that he will be ordered to Clusium by the authorities in Tunis; and he will have no possible reason for refusing. When the order comes he will have to go. It is up to you to decide what he is to find there."

There was a short pause, while the brothers thought.

"Is there no chance," asked Georges, "that the French will continue to leave Clusium unvisited? They always have respected it almost as a sacred shrine. Now that we are to have this new relationship with each other, between the Seknouga and the French, will they choose this time of all others to search Clusium? If it would not be a very happy beginning."

"It would not, indeed. But you must remember that there has been a revolt here, and it would be a miracle if the French were to overlook it altogether. I am absolutely certain that Col. de la Mezziere is a man of honor. He means every word of his under-laking. But he has got to convince his own superiors, and they have got to ratify the bargain we all made this morning."

"Surely," said Jules, "there can be no question of the French not being bound by what he said to us?"

"De la Mezziere told me that if there were any question of that he would resign his commission, and I believe him. The bargain is that Seknou should have more powers of self-administration now than it used to have, and that the family of Al Merhamesiz is to be recognized as the ruling dynasty; but don't forget that there is still to be a French resident."

The growing sound of an aircraft made him break off. It was apparently coming from the west, and the noise of its engines had come suddenly into earshot as it flew in low over the hill.

Allan was already at the window; but he could see nothing from there and nipped out into the garden, followed by the notables. The noise grew deafening, and then, only a few hundred feet above the roof, there appeared the heavy but graceful lines of a flying boat.

Allan and Mollie went to their old room in the hotel and were aroused later by a knock on the door. Allan opened it.

"Hall, Brisbarre!" said Allan. And he went out on the landing, shutting the door behind him.

"There's a man from Tunis in that flying boat," said Brisbarre indignantly. "Name of Loisy. He's some big shot in the Tunis Government. Apparently he flew down to Nail when he heard that that show was over. He kept well back when there was real trouble, and now he's shoving his nose wherever people manage to get themselves out of the mess which he was probably responsible for getting them into."

"We'll see him," said Allan.

Loisy proved to be as unprepossessing as Brisbarre had described him. He was small and dark and scowling. He reminded Allan instantly of Pierre Laval. He addressed half a dozen words to de la Mezziere, whose fuming temper seemed almost to be echoing off the walls of the room, but who bowed, and said to Mollie with the greatest possible politeness:

"Monsieur Loisy has asked me to express to you, with his homages, his most profound regrets, but he wishes to have the privilege of a few words in private with Col. Larg; and he wonders whether he could possibly ask you to wait, perhaps in the garden, for a few minutes while he is doing so?"

"Certainly," said Mollie, "and perhaps you might congratulate him, from me, on the way in which he managed to compress such a beautifully phrased hint into so few words. I thought it was masterly. Tell him some time that I heard exactly what he said, and that I understand French."

Contradictions in Story of Suicide

By JAMES MARLOW
Associated Press News Analyst.

WASHINGTON (AP) — It is 11 days since E. Herbert Norman, Canadian envoy to Egypt ended his own life.

There are contradictions in this story. The best way to approach it is from the beginning. Norman was first linked with communism at a 1951 hearing by Dr. Karl W. Wittfogel, a college professor and longtime Communist.

He said he met Norman in a Communist study group in 1938 at Cape Cod. He said Norman was a Communist. Except for saying it was "obvious," he never explained how he knew.

But Wittfogel was a mixed-up witness. That didn't become known until this month, six years later, when Robert Morris counsel for the subcommittee, said Wittfogel had not met Norman in 1938 at Cape Cod but in 1939 at Columbia.

This writer has gone through the voluminous volumes of the subcommittee hearings back to Wittfogel's testimony in 1951, and, with one exception, could find no instance where one other person ever said Norman was a Communist.

The exception was Morris himself. One thing was clear from reading the hearings: If Norman was not a Communist, he played around with them.

Canada's foreign secretary, Lester B. Pearson, stoutly defended Norman. He said Norman had been found loyal to Canada.

Pearson admitted that Norman in his youth had had Communist associations. But when asked twice point-blank on the floor of the House of Commons if Norman was a Communist, Pearson refused to answer.

The story moves up to March 1957. John K. Emmerson, a State Department career diplomat who had been investigated by his department in 1952 and cleared of any suspicion of communism, was called before the subcommittee to testify.

In 1944, when his specialty was psychological warfare, he was assigned by the State Department to Chinese Communist headquarters in Yenan. The Chinese Reds were using Japanese Communist prisoners for propaganda against their own people.

Emmerson wrote a memorandum to his superiors suggesting the United States use Japanese prisoners for propaganda against Japan too. A copy of this note was found by the subcommittee staff last year.

On March 1 Sen. Jenner (R-Ind.), a subcommittee member, told the Senate Emmerson had "slanted" his reports from China. Emmerson was called to testify, which he did on March 12 and 21.

During his explanation of the note and his later activities in the war, he mentioned meeting Norman, who he had known since 1940, in Tokyo in 1945. Under constant questioning by Morris, Emmerson said he had no reason to suspect or believe Norman was a Communist.

But Morris, all primed with information on Norman, said "We have quite a few security reports which have a great deal of information to the effect that he (Norman) is a Communist." He read from a document identified as "from a U. S. government executive agency security report."

He never identified the agency by name. The FBI later denied it had given the subcommittee any information on Norman. Army intelligence issued a similar denial. In his testimony Emmerson said he last saw Norman in Lebanon Oct. 27, 1956.

Emmerson was then with the American consulate in Lebanon, which is Israel's next door neighbor. Norman was coming to Lebanon to present his credentials as minister to that country. The meeting of those two men, Oct. 27, was two days before Israel invaded Egypt.

Before the hearing ended, Morris told Emmerson he was not under investigation. But on April 12 Sen. Eastland (D-Miss), chairman of the subcommittee, told the Senate the purpose of the hearings was not to investigate Norman but

State Capital Bureau

LITTLE ROCK, April 16 (Special) — Stockholders of Arkansas Louisiana Gas Co., of whom there are about 20,000 in the United States and other countries have been notified by the headquarters office in Shreveport, La., that the annual meeting will be held May 14 at Shreveport with nothing on the agenda at the moment except a routine election of directors.

What made the notice interesting was the disclosure of the amount of stock which each director had reported as owning March 29, the cut-off date for establishing eligibility to participate in the forthcoming election.

Of 4,599,945 shares outstanding, the directors all nominated for re-election were said to be owners to the extent indicated:

W. R. Stephens, Little Rock, chairman of board, 1,000 shares; J. C. Hamilton, Shreveport, president, 1,180; Joe C. Hardin, Little Rock, vice president and Arkansas general manager, 2,321; Henry C. Walker Jr., Shreveport, general counsel of company, 77; Lloyd Spencer, Hope, 6,000; W. T. Murphy Jr., Texarkana, 7,000; Cary M. Abney, Marshall, Tex., 681; Robert S. Davis, St. Paul, Minn., 70; Edward B. Kelley, Pittsburgh, Pa., 29; Emon A. Mahony, El Dorado, 1,210 Raymond Rebsamen, 242.

Those figures, of course, reflect only the stock owned personally; most of them are associated with or represent interests that have large Ark-La stock holdings. Mr. Kelley, for example, represents the Benedum interests which are among the principal owners.

Since the 1956 annual meeting, Ark-La stock that was transferred to W. R. Stephens Investment Co., from Cities Service Co., in December 1954 has been offered for public sale and sold or assigned through private negotiations. It constituted a majority of the outstanding shares. Stephens, Inc., Little Rock investment firm that was formed with Jack Stephens as president after his brother, W. R., resigned from W. R. Stephens Investment Co. to take over the Ark-La chairmanship was in the syndicate that made the public offering.

Ark-La informed its stockholders that the directors and officers of the company received $125,540.23 during 1956, with 30,200 salary for the president, Mr. Hamilton, included. During 1956 an annuity for him was contracted, with the company paying a $10,000 annual premium. Maximum retirement under $778.93 at age 75 and lesser amounts if retirement is at an earlier age.

Par value of the stock is $5 per share; the equity per share is $9.33, and its current market price on the American Stock Exchange is between $21.50 and $2.

Confronting Ark-La before the Arkansas Public Service Commission is two proceedings, one a remand from the Supreme Court of the major industrial rate protests and the other a proceeding that involves a proposed rate increase, with preferential service, for smaller industries.

COMPARE

See how the extra value in Chilean Soda makes an extra good crop of corn. Chilean is a natural combination of nitrate nitrogen, sodium and minor elements.

and you'll choose CHILEAN NITRATE OF SODA

One hundred years of consistently satisfactory experience with Chilean Nitrate of Soda have demonstrated that there is nothing to compare with it for side-dressing corn, cotton and other summer crops. It is a rare, natural combination of nitrate nitrogen, sodium and minor elements. Where the soil is too acid; where potash is deficient or where the supply of available phosphate is low; where the crop needs quick help; or where one or more of the minor elements is lacking, Natural Chilean Soda has no equal among nitrogen fertilizers.

The side-dressing effectiveness of any nitrogen fertilizer depends very largely on its content of nitrate nitrogen. The nitrogen content of Chilean Soda is 100 per cent nitrate nitrogen and this, together with its rich sodium content and minor elements, accounts for its remarkable efficiency and consistently superior performance in the field.

Sodium adds a great deal of extra value to the product. It destroys soil acidity, substitutes for potash and calcium when necessary, increases the supply of available phosphate, and helps the plant gain the utmost benefit from the nitrogen. In addition, Chilean Soda contains small amounts of needed minor elements which help to protect against hidden plant-food deficiencies.

If you have any question about your nitrogen side-dressing for corn, we urge you to use Chilean Nitrate, if only in a small way to begin with, so that you can see the difference for yourself. We are confident you'll find it the most economical and satisfactory nitrate nitrogen fertilizer you ever used for side-dressing your crops.
